

Highly Creative People Get Out of Their Own Head

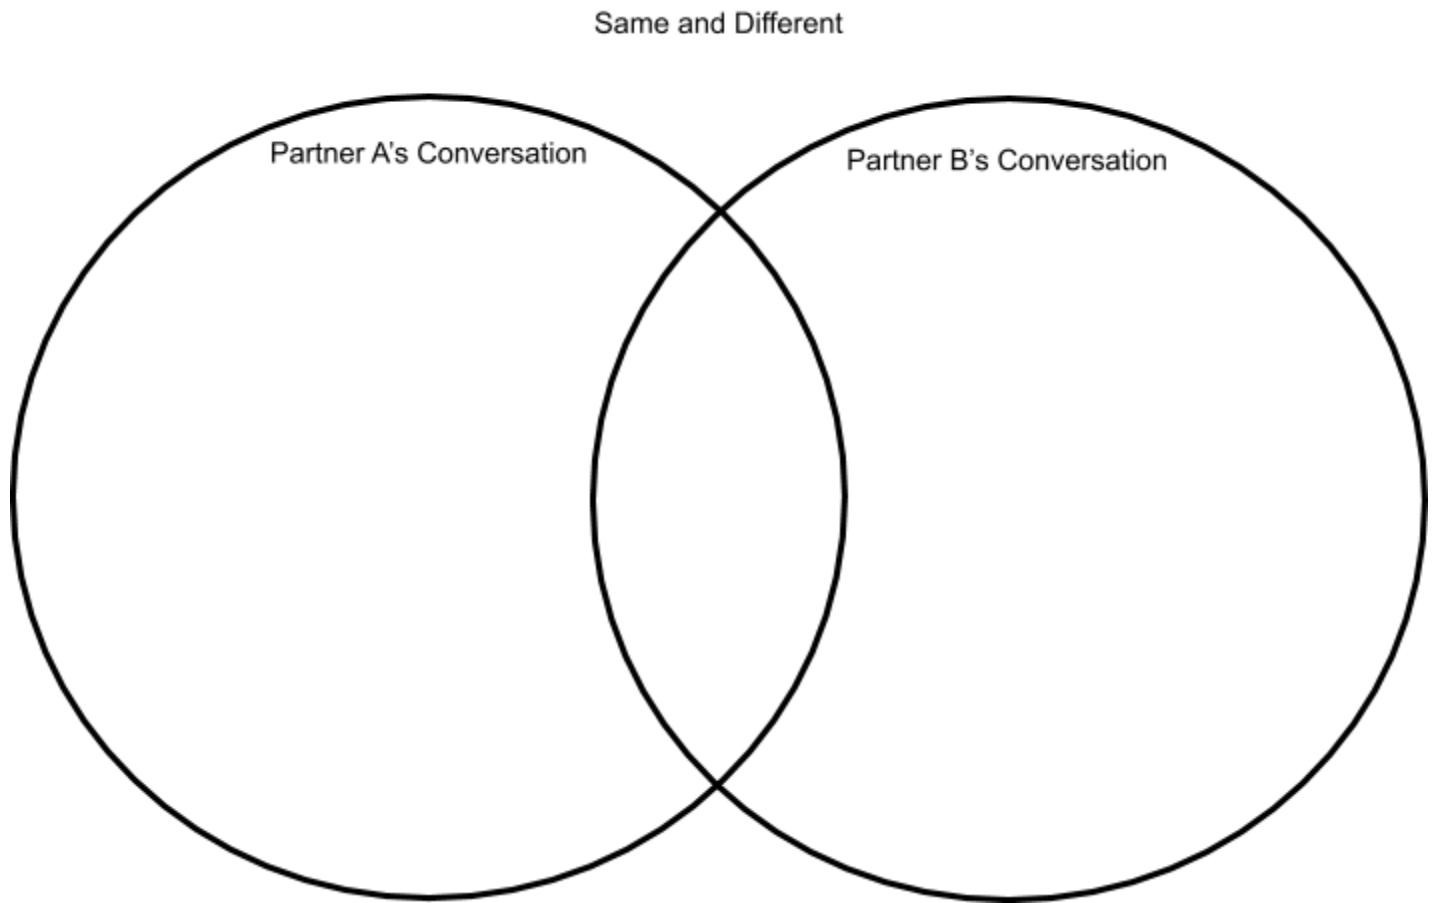

Directions: For this activity you will need a partner. Begin by each of you looking at the image below. Then create the conversation you imagine they are having in the space provided below.

Imagined Conversation:

Now share with your partner your imagined discussion and thought process in developing it. Then discuss the following questions on the following page:

How were your imagined conversations different? How were they similar? Use the graphic below to organize your thoughts.

Reflection Questions:

- How does seeing something through someone else's perspective change your own perspective?
- How do you provide opportunities for students to take different perspectives?

Read the "Highly Creative People Get Out of Their Own Heads" section on page 117 of Dr. Sulla's Building Executive Function: The Missing Link to Student Achievement for additional thoughts.